The EU's response to the COVID-19 pandemic and the position of the PES Group

The European Committee of the Regions

The Committee will adopt on 7 May a Declaration on "local and regional authorities as actors of the European response to the COVID-19 crisis". Members can submit amendments to the draft declaration via the Members' Portal by 4 May, 9 am. The PES Group Secretariat has already circulated 21 draft amendments for the members' consideration.

New initiatives of the European Commission

The European Commission is working on the new proposal for the Multiannual Financial Framework (MFF) and Recovery Fund, likely to be published on 6 May. The Commission proposal should clarify the link with the MFF to deal with the current crisis and its aftermath. The Commission is said to consider the following proposals:

- to increase the “Headroom” between the expenditure ceiling of the MFF and the own resources ceiling (currently at 1.20% of the EU GNI) for at least a number of years up to 2% of the EU GNI to provide extra room of manoeuvre for borrowing additional resources on the financial market;
- to use the money raised on the financial market via a temporary Recovery Instrument (RI) that would be created based on Art. 122 TFEU to finance a European Recovery Fund/Facility/Programme of around 320 bn EUR (tbc);
- the repayment of the bonds could either take place over a long period of time by the Member States that have received loans, or through future additional own resources. The MFF for 2021-2027 would only cover interest payments of around 0.5 bn EUR per year;
- the resources of the European Recovery Fund could then be used to support OR complement EU instruments such as the Structural Reform Support Programme and Cohesion Policy, to provide additional support for boosting the economy via grants and loans to the Member States.

Overall, the chances for an agreement on the MFF still in June seem to have increased.

For cohesion policy, in an interview with POLITICO Europe, Elisa Ferreira, Member of the European Commission in charge of Cohesion and Reforms, confirmed that some cohesion funds should come from money the Commission would raise from the financial markets. There is a discussion on the option that the European Commission could propose extending until 2022 the existing cohesion policy programmes and the rules governing cohesion spending, all set to expire at the end of this year. This approach would allow to use cohesion policy spending under the current (extended) rules for boosting the economy while the future programmes would focus on the long-term development strategies linked to the EU objectives of the Green Deal and digital transformation. The document also calls for new cohesion programmes to start in parallel — allowing new initiatives such as the Just Transition Fund to start — and for the Commission to “temporarily deviate from some rules in favour of some or all Member States in a crisis”.

Not related to COVID-19 but to the rule of law this time, is the European Commission’s launch on 29 April of a new formal infringement procedure against Poland. It concerns Poland’s new law on judiciary, approved in December 2019 and entered into force in February 2020. The Polish government now has two months to reply on the judicial independence of Polish judges.

The European Parliament

Economy

On Monday 27 April, the economic affairs (ECON) committee discussed the economic impact and response to the Covid-19 outbreak with Valdis Dombrovskis, Executive Vice-President, and Paolo Gentiloni, Commissioner for Economy.

Irene Tinagli, S&D Chair of the ECON committee, called for bold actions at European level to support the European economy after the crisis, otherwise the stability and the cohesion of the Eurozone will be under an unprecedented pressure.

Paolo Gentiloni, Member of the European Commission in charge of Economy, replied that more is needed to preserve the cohesion of our economy, firstly by restoring and deepening the Single Market, working on the sectors of the economy more exposed to the crisis, and secondly by fueling the recovery and modernising the economy with a Marshall-type effort to invest massively in the digital and green transition. Social sustainability will also be crucial.

Agriculture

On Tuesday 28 April, the agriculture (AGRI) committee voted on transitional measures to support the agriculture sector through the European Agricultural Fund for Rural Development and the European Agricultural Guarantee Fund from 1 January 2021. This decision will avoid cuts to the direct payments and the rural development respectively. This is a very important step for protecting a strategic sector badly affected by the COVID-19 crisis. This decision should come into force on 4 May.

The Council of the European Union

Tourism

On Monday 27 April, in an informal videoconference, the European Union’s Ministers responsible for tourism stressed that tourism should be amongst the main priorities of the EU’s recovery plan, following a letter by nine EU Member States (Italy, Greece, Spain, Portugal, France, Malta, Cyprus, Bulgaria and Romania). Moreover, they discussed the need for harmonised policy on matters such as refunds for package tours and liquidity for tour operators. They also discussed the potential for “tourist corridors” between Member States, involving oversight by epidemiologists, and the idea of a COVID-19 passport. Tourism represents 10% of the EU’s GDP and provides jobs for almost 12% of workers in the European Union. European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen promised “smart solutions” and “more detailed guidance” to lift controls across Europe in a coordinated matter, but there is no date yet for when they will be published. According to the European Commission, the EU’s tourism sector could lose at least 50 percent of its turnover this year.

- “Europe’s south says common exit plan needed to save tourism”, Euractiv, 27 April, <https://www.euractiv.com/section/politics/news/europes-south-says-common-exit-plan-needed-to-save-tourism/>

The situation of the tourism sector is particularly worrying for many cities and regions represented within the PES Group. It will be important to make sure that there will be financial support for tourism-related businesses, in particular the small ones through the recovery plan. An opinion on sustainable tourism is currently ongoing in the NAT commission of the European Committee of the Regions (Manuel Alejandro Cardente Flores - ES/RE). It should be on the agenda of the online NAT meeting in June.

Internal affairs

Migration was high on the agenda of the General Affairs Council Meeting on 28 April, where EU Interior Ministers debated three main areas: internal and external borders, use of tracing applications, and shift in criminal activities.

The situation is particularly difficult at the border with Turkey, where the European Commission is working closely with the Greek authorities to help implement an emergency response plan to address risks of a potential outbreak of coronavirus on the migrant camps on Greek islands. The transfer of unaccompanied minors on the European mainland is significantly hampered by the COVID-19 outbreak, even if Luxembourg and Germany have started welcoming the first groups.

As PES Group, we are convinced that Europe has to act now to stop a humanitarian crisis to turn into a social and a public health one. Our firm belief is that a comprehensive reform of the EU’s migration and asylum policy framework is more urgent than ever and should not be delayed by the focus on the immediate health crisis.

Energy

On 28 April, EU energy ministers held an informal video conference on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the energy sector, which also covers the issues of preparedness and recovery. The ministers agreed that the energy sector will play a key role in a sustainable recovery plan, in line with the European Green Deal and together with the national energy and climate plans.

- Press release of the Croatian Presidency after the meeting, 28 April, <https://eu2020.hr/Home/OneNews?id=261>

Transport

On 29 April, ministers responsible for transport held an informal video conference to discuss the consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic with 90% of European flights grounded. Social distancing measures seem very difficult to implement and many airline companies have already sought and found the support of their national government (Lufthansa/Austrian, Air France/KLM).

Ministers are coming to an agreement to suspend passengers’s rights in these exceptional circumstances, following a letter signed by 12 Member States that is now getting more support. Some Member States opposed changes to the current rules so as not to frustrate the legitimate expectations of passengers. The 12 States having signed the letter potentially represent a qualified majority in the Council.

Moreover, the European ministers support the securing of Green Lanes in order to facilitate the transport of goods within the EU. They also acknowledge the necessity to strengthen the role of rail freight transport corridors. Last but not least, for shipping, ministers put special emphasis on the necessity to resolve concrete issues to ensure safe working conditions.

On MFF, there is consensus that the MFF and the recovery fund should fully reflect the needs of the transport sector, particularly in terms of liquidity and investments. The need to condition these investments to the implementation of the European Green Deal has not been mentioned as far as we know.

The fight against fake news

The European Union has been at the centre of a campaign of disinformation and fake news related to the COVID-19 in recent weeks. After initial pro-Kremlin attacks, this week the media widely reported on the new Chinese propaganda campaign, which is critical of Western democracies and their handling of the coronavirus.

Moreover, Google News Initiative has just announced the Journalism Emergency Relief Fund, which is focused on small and medium sized news organisations across the world, and applications opened on Monday for the Facebook Journalism Project COVID-19 Local News Relief Fund. These two initiatives could provide some much-needed support during this time of crisis.
